Wrigley On Prosperity

That business is improving in the East and that this condition is spreading to the Middle West by degrees, is the opinion of William Wrigley, Jr., president of the William Wrigley, Jr. Co., Chicago.

The good old American dollar is coming back into its own. People from one end of the nation to the other are getting around to the idea that the only basis for real prosperity is an honest day's work for a fair day's wage.

The United States as a whole has been on a "business spree" for the past five years. Prices up to recently, were out of all sense of proportion for the value received.

The greatest cure for hard times, Mr. Wrigley says, is to stop talking about hard times, get to work and keep money and goods circulating.

The year 1921 was regarded as a pretty bad period for lots of concerns in the East and Middle West," said Mr. Wrigley. "For us it was the best year in the thirty years I have been in the chewing gum manufacturing industry."

"We are spending $11,000 a day this year to push Wrigley's Chewing Gum."

"The judicious use of printers ink is the greatest selling force in the world. If you do business on a world-wide basis, or even in the locality encompassed within a few blocks, you have got to keep the people interested or you won't sell them your goods."

MISS CHENAULT'S FINE WORK AT U. K.

Lexington, Ky., April 20—Sue Chenault, daughter of C. F. Chenault, of Richmond, popular University of Kentucky girl, will complete her work at the University this June and be graduated with the class of June '22. This concludes Miss Chenault's second year at the University, having entered in her junior year. She is a student in the Arts and Science college, majoring in English and minoring in journalism.

Miss Chenault, a very talented girl in many lines, has shown her talent especially in dramatic and journalistic work and has proved herself an outstanding student in both. She has appeared in many plays at the University and on the night that the University entertained the legislators at the Phoenix Hotel in February, Miss Chenault made an outstanding hit and was greatly applauded for her part as Dame Gossip with her hair screwed in a tight knot on the back of her head, and her face made up with many lines, she certainly looked the part, a complete reversal of her usual buoyancy. Miss Chenault's characterizations have lent themselves mostly to impersonating old women.

Miss Chenault's sweet voice won for her the part of Peep Boo in the Mikado operetta produced by the University in which she received due praise as a singer as well as an actress. When O. Henry's story, "The Gift of the Magi," was dramatized and presented by University students, she took the part of Mrs. Purdy. This play was taken to Mt. Sterling where it was played. In "Butterflies," the opening play of the University Little Theatre for this season, Miss Chenault took the part of Mrs. Brenner, Mari's mother, a demented old woman. Just recently she has appeared in "The Man who Married a Dumb Wife," given in the Little Theatre at the University of Kentucky. In this play she took the part of a young girl, Alison.

Miss Chenault is a member of the Theta Sigma Phi, honorary journalistic fraternity for women; president of the Madison County Club and a member of the English Club at the University.

COLVIN SAYS SEND PROFESSORS OUT

(By Associated Press)

Lexington, Ky., April 20—College professors should be sent out before the people on every occasion possible and thus acquaint the public with what kind of men they are and what is being taught in the colleges and universities, George Colvin, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, today told the National University Extension Association. He declared that in this way the influence and power and popularity of universities everywhere could be increased.

"There is one temptation," he said, "to which, it seems to me, the college professors are susceptible by reason of their very position. Appointment by boards, with an indefinite if not permanent tenure of office, living their lives in the classroom, cloistered and secluded and isolated, there is a great tendency to lose touch with the people; there is almost an absolute power. Sometimes they lose the common touch. I believe that every member of the faculty should be given the opportunity and should be compelled to accept it, of appearing before the people and of helping them to solve their problems directly."

"This conference is considering the question of extension. One of the most effective ways of extending the influence and the power and the popularity of universities everywhere is in sending the members of the faculty out into the state on every possible occasion. The people do not know the members of the faculty; for that reason the people are inclined to believe slanders against the members of the faculty. Give the members of the faculty a chance to show the people exactly what they are and what they believe and what they teach and the people will come to believe in them and to love them even as the student body does now."

The state superintendent declared that the state would not have good schools until the people want good schools and that they will want good schools until they are convinced of their virtue. "Our obligation is to persuade the people to accept the truth," he said.

"School people, in common with people of other professions," he said, "rely too much on legislation. Legislation when it is effective at all, merely reflects popular sentiment and does not create it. Lobbying with legislators exercising political influence with the party in power, is not our way out. We sometimes feel that politicians are hostile to educational progress. We fail to remember that politicians everywhere are governed by that which is popular and which is powerful. Create an intelligently informed, insistent, public sentiment that favors educational progress and no politician in the state or nation will dare oppose the schools' demands. It does not profit us greatly, however, to criticize legislatures. We must go to the legislature because the legislature is merely the creature of the people. We must even respect the ignorance of the people. They have an absolute right to be opposed to education until they have been taught. There are communities in every state in the union that have never known an efficient school or a strong teacher. Judging by their own experience, they have a right to question the value and virtue of schools." He advised that the support of the people be sought and other things will come.

Colleges and universities throughout the nation are being attacked at present, he said, some of them seeking to array the church against the school. The church and school are not in irreconcilable conflict he added charges that "are made against universities and colleges are due to mistakes sometimes on the part of an individual teacher, but for the most part to misunderstanding and misinformation."
